Who should submit this form?

The NCPS should be submitted by the noncustodial parent for all first-time undergraduate financial assistance applicants whose parents are separated, divorced, or were never married and are not living together. This includes first-year and transfer applicants to our 2017–2018 entering class and current students wishing to apply for financial assistance at Washington University for the first time. The student and parent(s) should work together to complete the NCPS.

If I submit the CSS Noncustodial Parent Statement, should I also submit the NCPS?

It is not necessary to submit both forms. Some families find it convenient to complete the CSS Noncustodial Parent Statement in order to send their financial information to several schools at once. However, the NCPS is a shorter form with fewer questions — and it’s free! You may submit the NCPS online at ncps.wustl.edu.

How will Washington University determine my eligibility for financial assistance?

For students whose parents are divorced, separated, or were never married, the financial assistance award is based on either the Family Financial Profile (FFP) or CSS PROFILE, in addition to the NCPS or CSS NCPS.

Is my information shared with others?

Financial information submitted to Student Financial Services is kept confidential. Your information will not be shared.

Where should the completed NCPS be sent?

You may submit the NCPS online at ncps.wustl.edu, or send this form to our office:
